TREATMENT OF PINK-EYE.—C. R. H. Allen, N. Y.: Pink-eye, so called, is the present popular name of a form of influenza which affects the nasal and optical membranes in an unusually acute manner. The lungs and air-passages are also seriously involved, and sometimes the inflammation spreads to the brain, when the animal becomes frantic and very violent. The treatment is very simple—a dose of 12 ounces of epsom salts and 1 ounce of saltpetre is given to allay the fever and cool the system. This may be repeated the second day. The horse is kept warm and the legs bathed in hot water: the head is wrapped in a cloth dipped in cold water and kept wet, the poll and forehead being especially treated in this way. Lined or oat-meal gruels is given, the stable is cleaned and kept well aired, the animal being well wrapped up and in general well nursed. The disease is rarely troublesome; the horse suffers most from inflammation of the eyes and headache. The stable should be kept dark.

For Rheumatism in Horses

The feet are not heated as in acute founder which is confined to the feet alone. The seat of acute Rheumatism is in the joints and legs but the horse is sweat profusely and breathe heavily and rapidly. Put him in a comfortable air place under a light blanket and clothe in cold water in summer and warm in winter and splash them locally to the part affected keeping them wet. Give ʒ of Acornit root in doses of 25 and at every 4 hours till I have seen a return of no better by this time give one drachm of Periwinkle Root one Laffron seed twice a day

6. Notebook of Medical Remedies (receipts book), id. no. 004348, 1847-1864, full calf very good, oblong, 13 by 21.5 cm. Handwritten medical recipes and concoctions, both human and some equine. A total of 59 pages of text, starting at both ends of the book, with many blanks in between -- over 100 blank pages. Ten pages starting at the front are just notations for the receipt of funds; these are helpful in terms of dating and location. The other end is entirely recipes, and thus of far greater interest in terms of content. Recipes are for such things as purgative horse balls, Golan tincture, Breed's Bitter Tincture, a cure for Rheumatism, a treatment for Rheumatism of horses, balms for scratches, medicines for fever, cholera, Scarlet Fever, ague, and Pink Eye; a stomach bitter, a treatment for dysentery, a tooth powder, cough mixtures and syrups, and on and on. With pills, powders, syrups, creams, oils, teas, etc. Unusual concoctions include McNair's Blister and other blisters. All written in a neat, near calligraphic hand. Heavy wear to the cover. Some scattered soiling. Marbled endpapers. Price: 500.00 USD
